The town of Bedford was surveyed and laid out in 1766 by the Proprietary of the province.

About 1750 a Scotchman named Ray established an Indian traders post at the place. For many years the post was known as Raystown. "The Raystown Branch" of the Juniably so called after Ray, or his post.

Raystown, August 13, 1759" This A high and thick stone v until the year 1766, when the town was regularly laid out by the Propri etory and called "Bedford."

According to tradition, the Duke of ers. Bedford, prime minister of the English government, presented to the commander of the fort a beautiful eilken English flag, in appreciation of the honor. This flag is still in an excellent state of preservation in Bedford.

An act of assembly was passed in 1795, incorporating the town of Bedford. But for some unknown reason the act was not accepted. However the town was regularly organized as a ner of the public square, for the sum borough under the act of 5th Febru- of $7,500," with Joseph S. Morrison and ary, 1817.

Hagar and the Mother of Moses

BY HEV. E. N. KREMER, D. D. When Hagar, in the desert wild, Lamented o'er her dying child, She pierced the heavens with her cry Until it reached the throne on high. This mother must in silence weep Or rouse the men of blood that sieep Or rouse the men of blood that steep; For fiercer than the desert's heat Are the cruel hearts that near her beat. The One Who witnessed Hogar's woe And caused the gushing fount to flow. For this one checks the Miels swift tide And bids His currents gently glide; His angels watch the babe aftoat. And safely guard the leafy boat. From Ishmael nations sprang to life. From Ishmael nations spraing to lite, Nations innured to war and strife; But Moses by the water suved. Was raised to free a race enslaved. The wild bird soaring in his flight, Clearing the air with keen delight, The wild beast coursing o'er the plain, With broader vision he could see Law the safe-guard of liberty. Law the safe-guard of hiberty.

Re half foundations deep and strong,
Which insted through the ages long,
Which still survive to bless the land
That's guided by his master hand.
While Ishmael's scattered tribes disperse
And go from evil unto worse,
The several tribes of Jacob join
By Moses welded into one,
And hold, while subject to his rod, oses weight into one, sold, while subject to his rod, readom of the Sons of God. —Reformed Church Messenger.

Give Us the Facts. Nearly four months have elapsed since election, says the March Atlantic, and there has been not only no appreciable progress in establishing ivil government in the Philippines, but no indication that the majority in congress realize that the country has a right to expect from them a definite Philippine programme. While the lives of volunteer American soldiers have been in deadly peril, congress has been debating the details of a worse, the country has been deceived as to the plain facts of the Philippine situation. The reports of generals in the field, the finding of the two comnissions, the messages of the president, the speeches of recognized leaders of the party, contain absolutely irreconcilable statements. Ours is a government by public opinion. But how is the public-spirited citizen to learn the truth about the most elementary facts concerning the Filipinos, such as their tribal relations, the extent to which they use a common language, the state of popular education and political intelligence, and the territorial limits of their present rebellion against the United States? Even upon fundamen tal questions like these, our newspa ners and magazines are as confused and contradictory as any intelligence given out by the administration Schlosser to Fort Niagara, only three Are the revolutionists "a few disaffeeted Tagalogs," or are we encountering the patriotic resistance of a pracknown at Washington. Republic. Special Correspondence of The Gazetta. NEW YORK, February 26 - Everyone who has carefully observed the social twenty or thirty years must certainly have noted the change which has been radical to excite serious alarm. New York, ever since it was settled by Europeans, has always had a marked taste for old blue blood; pedigree and fortune were the golden links that secured the safety of the social bond and, to quote the simile of an eminent member of the English parliament, Ever since creation's dawn the condi-

than it has been in the history of the world and the condition of the employer and employee will continue to exist down to the end of time. It is well for the human race and for the world's progress that it is so; and it is well for the men who toil in the summer's heat and the winter's cold that there is a class above them whose luxurious lead to public and violent disturbance wants require the things that the most xperienced workmen can create. The recent death of Great Britain's queen will naturally lead men to compare their own government with that of any other on the face of the earthmore powerful illustration of "Libberty, Equality, Fraternity," which of the old Maryland families have married foreigners, the Carrolls, of Carrollton, being notably distinguished quite as much for their beauty as their title. The wealth of the United States has doubled itself since 1860. It has been an age of colossal fortunes suddenly acquired in a single life. The fortunes of the Rothschilds were the result of several thrifty generations and a most perfect knowledge of finance. Within the century just My Condition Could recontracted Blood nnance. Stephen Girard's fortune was about $7,000,000, John Jacob Aster's, about $5,000,000, and William Gray's, about $3,000,000. Now, mark the difference. Thirty years ago Andrew Carnegie was comparatively a poor man; a short time ago a deal was made for a portion of his steel belongings on the basis of $150,000,000. It may be true that the small capitalist will find little comfort in the contemplation of future trade, but the added influence of these associa tions will be a benefit and a profit to the poor working man. The future of our republic will depend upon the wisdom of its laws, the foundation of which must support a structure the motto of which must be "The greatest good to the greatest number." The constitution of our country is against a settled nobility held in place by the going forward. We have pinned our faith to a republican form of government, not a democracy pure. but a representative democracy, where many men seek one man to deliver their will in the great councils of the nation. A democracy pure and simple neets in general council and viva voce declares its will. This was found to without any commensurate good, and, therefore, the representative was adopted as the wisest form of government. England is governed by a limited nonarchy; its chief is supposed to rule by divine right, but his conduct is subject to the review of the people The commons hold the public purse; all acts involving the expenditure of public money must emanate from the commons: the use of the money and the exercise of power is directed by the higher house of lords. The house of lords is supposed to be a guard closer prophet on the blood-bought field of to the king than the commons; Gettysburg voice the desire nearest the the great body of the people nation's heart when he sent forth that sympathize with the commons, and the lords gather round the king. The balance existing between the two is regarded as the highest form of human government known to man. [Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis,] When Mr. Gallap sat down for the evening, he had his newspaper on his ee and Mrs. Gallup was singing "Rock of Ages" and clearing away the supper table. He had been reading for a quarter of an hour when she quietly entered and sat down and said:

"Samuel, I don't want to disturb you nor make you feel bad, but I feel obliged to ask you a few questions. Las night at midnight Mrs. Watkins saw a light moving around in our back yard It was a light which bobbed up and bobbed down and dodged this way and that and when it finally went out it gave a great wink and a splutter. It was what they call a ghost lantern, Samuel, and it meant that there would be death in this house within a week. It'll be my death, of course. I've got 27 different ailments, with heart disease throwed in, while you are as healthy as a cornfield. Yes; it'll be me but I'm not weepin over it. I'm sittic right here as calm as catnip, but I want to know some few things."

Mr. Gallup must have known of he presence, but he was too deeply interested in his paper to recognize it. He bad found an article which said that a bedbug could be boiled in water for four hours and then come out with his ambition undaunted. "I shall go to heaven when I die, of course," continued Mrs. Gallup as her voice broke a little. "I orter go there. cellar every spring for 27 years, besides makin soft soap, cuttin carpet rags, dyein over old clothes and makin one corset last her for 13 years, will go to heaven on the jump. What bothers me, however, is how I'm goin to act arter I git there. You know how company allus flustrates me. If three or four of the neighbors come in. I'm almost sure to fall off my cheer or knock over sunthin. How's it goin to be when I git up there and meet a bull pasture full of angels? There'll be millions of em, Samuel, and they'll all be lookin at me and wonderin who I am, and I'll be upsot that I'll fall over my own

She paused to wipe the tears from her eyes with the palm of her hand. but as she had asked no direct questions Mr. Gallup finished the bug article and turned to one on the care of clotheslines. "I don't want to be looked at and p'inted out and made fun of up there," said Mrs. Gallun as she sat with her eyes on the carpet. "All night long last night I couldn't sleep for thinkin that some of the angels would turn up their noses at me and want to know what on mirth I was doin there. You remember Sarah Jane Bixby, who died two years ago? Sarab was snippy and sassy. If she went to heaven, it would be jest her way to want to know why I'd come flyin up there, with my rheumatiz and back aches. I'd have to sass her back and then what would happen? Angels do sass each other sometimes, don't they, Samuel?"

If Mr. Gallup had ever given the matter a thought, he was too o cuss it. The statement was right before his eyes that 1,000,000 miles of clothesline went to destruction every year for want of being bung up in the wood shed when not in use, and he was reflecting on the carelessness of hamanity in general. "I may git up to heaver in the night, when all the angels are asleep, and so I'll slip in all right. I hope that'll be the way, because it'll give me a chance to kind o' git used to the place before daylight. Do you think they have any breakfast up there? Mrs. Watkins says they don't, but I don't really see boy they git along without it. I know ! should feel a goneness all day without brookfast And I want you to look at me, Samuel, and see if I'm the bum blyest woman ever born. I have read that when we die we are changed as in the twinklin of an eye. I hope it's so If it ain't, then I can't expect no good times up there. Them angels will be p intin out my lop shoulder, my big feet and my wabbly knees and perin to each other that I'd better staid down on wirth among the cabbage Nobody as knows me can call me obsti nate or sot, but I'll be snummed if propose to die and become an angel to be made fun of. You'll be on my side shout that, wan't you?"

Mr. Gallup heaved a long sigh and seemed about to speak, but no word came. He had finished with the clothesline and struck an article about the reasoning powers of the crow, and the most direct question from Mrs. Gailup would have passed unheeded. Her tears feil for two or three minutes, and then she asked:

And how about the beds up there? You know we've slept on a feather bed ever since we was married, and I've allus bin particular to smooth it down from head to foot. I've got used to feathers, and if I changed off I'd jest lay there and kick around all night long. Do they hev beds, Samuel, or do they keep on fivin around all night long and singin "I've Reached My Home at Last?" Seems to me that fiyin and singin all day would be enough unless I feel stronger than I do now. You orter know these things. Samuel, and you orter tell me so I'll know what to depend on. I might stand sass from a thousand angels, but I do want my own bed when night comes, and if on of my headaches comes on unexpectedly I want to know that I kin hev a cup of tea. Mrs. Watkins says they don't drink tea in heaven, but I don't see how she kin know." Mr. Gallup was not directly appealed to, and as he was reading that a crow had been known to feign death to avoid having a crowbar thrown at him he

"Waal, I've made up my mind to a few things," said Mrs. Gallup as the sllence grew painful. "I'm goin up to heaven to do the best I kin. I'll be nayburly with all the angels I meet and let 'em understand that I don't want no more'n my share of harps and wings and things. If I don't find anythin to eat or any beds to sleep on, 1 shan't raise no fuss nor go into bysterics, the way Mrs. Taylor did at came things as I find 'em and make the best of it, and I won't be jealous if a few of yards of the race.

pettern me. 'That's how I'll act, Bamuel, and then if they pick on me they'll git as good as they give. I kin be sassed and picked on jest so fur, but arter that they want to look out died at night instead of in the daytime? As I said, if I died at night I could slip nto heaven without any fuss, but i HUSBAND it's coin to make you any extra trouble 'il perish by daylight. What will be the most convenient hour fur you?" There was deep silence. Mrs. Gallup's tears made no thud as they fell upon the carpet, and Mr. Gallup was reading with hated breath that an astrich covers 13 feet of ground at every stride when in full flight. The clock ticked, the silence grew deeper, and the cricket on the hearth fell into a doze. Then Mr. Gallup suddenly laid aside his paper, stretched his arms and "Ho-hum!" and looked around to find Mrs. Gallup asleep in her chair. She hadn't gone to join the M. QUAD. angels—not yet. prised the British. When Harry Houdini, the American king of handcuffs, arrived in England, he tried to arrange for an exhibit of his skill at Scotland Yard, but the authorities refused to allow him an opportunity of putting on or taking off official handcuffs, says London M. A. P. So, accompanied by a skeptica. London manager, he paid an ordinary call as an American visitor to the police headquarters. Mr. Houdini, after making the usual remarks on everything be saw and heard, cusually asked a question about a pair of handcuffs. The guide took them down and answered: "Oh, these are handcuffs impossible to remove." Hondini was greatly interested, and the incident closed by the American visitor requesting his guide to lock the handcuffs on his wrists turned his back and succeeded in getting them off in a couple of minutes. One of Houdini's strangest adventures happened at a big hotel in St. Paul, Minn., where he was very well known. To his surprise, he found that couple of men occupying the rooms on either side of his own appeared to be mounting guard over him. At first be only suspected this, but after a few days he was perfectly sure that one or the other of his neighbors shadowed his every movement. One afternoon, when Houdini was sitting in his own room, he heard the sound of scuffling outside the door. Flinging it open, he discovered his two unknown friends grasping a third man, who had evi lently been wearing a long dark cane that was dragged on one side, showing that he was heavily hunderfied. "We're a couple of detectives, Mr. Hondinia panted one of the men. This fellow made his escape from jail some days ago. We knew that he wouldn't dare to go to a locksmith to get his handouff's removed, and we

She Declined. Few American youths have careers made for them. Those who deplore this fact and shun the stings of self effort may find tonic in the reply of a western girl to an offer of marriage. A young man of more book learning than force of character lest the young wife who had toiled to suppor him, returned to his native town for consolation and found it. Some months later she, too, passed away, and the sad youth soon appealed to a well known elergyman for assistance in finding a belomate.

The minister introduced him to a western girl of health and energy, who the next day received a plaintive note from the widower. He declared that the Lord had made great incoads upon his marital affections, and it not seemed to be his will that she would repair the breaches of his life.

The reply, which the elergyman keeps today as one of the choicest specimens of a varied collection, reads simply:

A Cool Housemald. A rather curious method of burglan eatching was resorted to by an ingenious maldservant recently in New York. As The Electrical Review tells the story, while in pursuit of her household duties the maid noticed a man's foot inside the clothes closet, She did not scream, neither did she jump at the door nor shut it with a hang Justood she took a broom and began to sweep that corner of the room near the closet. Her approach was gradual, and the sweeping was done so naturally that it would not have aroused the most suspicious hurglar. At last the broom brushed the door gently, but hard enough to close it to the fraction of an inch. With five or six more gentle sweeps that closet door was shut and almost latched, by gently pressing her arm against it.

As the telephone in her house was so near the closet that the burglar would be able to hear her if she called for assistance, she bethought herself of another plan. In the back yard some telephone linemen were at the time making repairs on a wire that runs to another house in the block. got the man.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest boon on earth to suffering women."-MRS. ANNA ASTON, Box 13, Troy, Mo.

Ovarian trouble is serious trouble. Every woman knows this. Frequently she has ovarian trouble when she thinks she has only a "pain in the side." All at once she finds herself unable to walk. She is a sick woman. An operation, dangerous and expensive, is the usual procedure, and, at best, she can expect mercy to gather together the character stringle.

Many times this is necessary and many times it is not. It is wise for every woman to be convinced that every backache and sideache, every abdominal pain, indicates semething wrong, and something which will not go away itself or be driven away by hard work. It is also right for every woman to know that for every disorder of the feminiae organs Lydin E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the perfect treatment, that it is the medicine
